

XM Raidio's weather and traffic has been a great help to me while traveling throughout the country on my motorcycle. When I need to know what the weather or traffic is in a specific area or route I don't have to continually check am or fm radio channels, I have it already programed in my XM Radio. I don't see the FCC going after cable tv for their weather and traffic stations? What's the difference between XM Radio and Cable TV they are both paid for services?

Thank you and I hope common sense prevails? Thank You.
